A borehole is a narrow shaft bored in the ground, either vertically or horizontally. A borehole may be constructed for many different purposes, including the extraction of water, other liquids (such as petroleum) or gases (such as natural gas), as part of a geotechnical investigation, environmental site assessment, mineral exploration, temperature measurement, as a pilot hole for installing piers or underground utilities, for geothermal installations, or for underground storage of unwanted ...

Cased Hole Log Interpretation Principles/Applications Published in 1989, Cased Hole Log Interpretation Principles/Applications provides a thorough background in cased hole log interpretation, the process by which parameters measured through casing, e.g., thermal decay time and interval transit time, are translated into the desired petrophysical parameters of porosity, hydrocarbon saturation, producibility, lithology, and mechanical rock properties.

Reflection seismology (or seismic reflection) is a method of exploration geophysics that uses the principles of seismology to estimate the properties of the Earth's subsurface from reflected seismic waves.

There is a variety of multicomponent seismology geometries in industry. This involves, for example 3C/2D, 3C/3D, 3C/4D, 4C/2D, 4C/3D, 4C/4D and 9C3D (3-component shear source recorded by 3-component sensor).

MTI prides itself on giving back to the local communities in a multitude of ways. One way that MTI gives back is by providing both public and private educational and training opportunities.

Since the rapid rise to dominance of the plume-head/plume-tail model for flood basalts (Richards et al., 1989; Campbell & Griffiths, 1990), hundreds of papers have invoked, or supported, a plume head origin for the Deccan Traps of India.
